TRUST UPDATE – OCTOBER 20, 2020

Elimination of the Ready to Process Button: In January 2014, the Trust modified Trust Online to require that a claimant affirm that their claim was complete and ready to process before the Trust would review or re-review it. As discussed in its February 18, 2020 Trust Update, the Trust discontinued this requirement for new claim filings on March 1, 2020.

Effective October 23, 2020, the Trust will discontinue all use of the Not Ready functionality in Trust Online. As a result, when a claim is filed with a completed claim form and documents, the claim will continue to be placed in line for an initial review unless the claim is deferred or is on a hold pending additional research. Similarly, when a deficient claim is updated with cures for all pending deficiencies, the claim will be placed in the appropriate review queue unless the claim is deferred or is on a hold pending additional research. If you have claims in Not Ready status that you do not want reviewed when the Not Ready functionality is discontinued, you should defer the claims if they are eligible to be deferred.
